EL HEIRIE'S VICTORY

But the Committee Will Hold Yet Another Trial Among the Half-Raters.

It Will Be Sailed To-morrow, and the Defender Will Be Chosen from Five Designs.

"LEFF" HOYT FELL OVERBOARD.

While Jibing, One of Paprika's Crew Took an Unexpected Bath-The Winner Was Well Handled Throughout.

In a steady downpour of dispiriting rain and under a sheet of leaden gray cloud, the butterfly fleet of half-raters sailed its third race yesterday in a vain attempt to decide Its sesting capacity, it is estimated be about 300. which boat should have the honor of de-because the winner had not won before, and some of the others had falled to do as well as they had done in different weather. El Helrie, designed by C. H. Crave, of Boston, and sailed by him and his brother, won bandsomely yesterday, with Riverside second and Paprika third. On the previous day Riverside won, with Vesper second, and in the first trial Ideal was the victor. The Race Committee, therefere, decided to hold another trial to-morrow and to admit as starters Ideal, El Helrie, Riverside Paprika and Vesper.

Paprika won her place yesterday by her Paprika won her place yesterday by her clever work in beating in a good breeze and a ruffled bit of water. El Heirie's victory yesterday was agreeable to all lovers of scientific designing, because the boat is a development, along well-considered lines of naval architecture of what is known as the "slab" type, embodied in the Huntington boats Question and Hope. The committee's scientifia met with unqualified approval from the experts present at yesterday's race. It will bring together to-morrow representatives of every

In gybing round Paprika came near losing half her crew. She was salied by Sherman and "Left" Hoyt, and the latter, while shifting fibs, fell overboard. His brother calmly reached over the side and hauled him aboard, while Paprika splashed on around the mark, and what might have been a sensational incident became a mere bit of fun. The racers rounded the second mark on the second round in the following order:

IDEAL AND RIVERSIDE FIRST OFF.

A prettier start aever was seen. The twenty-two little yachts flew over the line like a covey of quall just flushed. Ideal and Riverside were in the lead and the others in a swarm astern of them. All set spinnakers to starboard as they went flying toward the first mark at a pretty pace. The minutes after the start they caught a heavy puff out of the entrance to the bay and some of the spinnakers were blown forward clear over the jib stays. Smart work was done in getting in canvas and no accident happened.

Positions changed so fast as the yachts caught puffs or bianketed one another that no order was maintained in the procession till near the first mark. Here the leaders gybed around in the following order: Riverside, El Heirie, Triiby, Die Hexe, Paprika, Cyclone.

PLUNGER WHITE IN COURT. He and His Wife Deny Cuthbert & Co.'s Claim for $10,000 Advanced to Him.

After forty days, twenty-two hours and defendant in a suit before Justice Gildersleeve and a jury yesterday in Trial Term. Part VII., of the Supreme Court, which was instituted by Edward B. Cuthbert, William E. Young, Sr., and Wm. E. Young, Jr., for the recovery of $10,000 on a promissory note, dated March 9, 1896, and payable one day after date.

According to Cuthbert's testimony, White was a customer of plaintiffs and owed them the sum at issue. Cuthbert said he advised White to leave Wail Street alone. White retorted that he had cleared $100,0000 inone day, and could do it again. At his carnest equest. Cuthbert let him open an extra account to the extent of $1,000. Soon afterward White stopped calling at the office and when Cuthbert met him on the street and demanded his money, White said he couldn't pay it.
